The EHLER (OHLER) Family

IMMIGRATION DATA

Although German in origin, the family in this country has come to be identified with that group of early Americans known as the "Pennsylvania Dutch". The early English settlers coined this name and they really meant to say "Deutsch", meaning German, but the word soon became corrupted into "Dutch". They applied this name to those Swiss, German and even French Huguenots who arrived here in the 1700's and settled in a certain small area roughly defined as: south-central and eastern Pennsylvania.

This was in 1711. ✓ ✓

The before mentioned ships were English, embarking from the port of Rotterdam and landing at Philadelphia harbor. Almost all the passengers on board these ships were from the Palatinate section of Germany. Since generally only the names of the adult male passengers were listed, it is likely that some of the above men were accompanied by their families.

In the eighteenth century conditions were poor in the Palatinate section of Germany. In the year 1709 a large colony of Palatines emigrated from Germany to the New World. They landed at New York and settled there in the Mohawk Valley where they discovered conditions to be as bad, if not worse, than those they had left behind. By 1711 many had returned to Germany bringing with them tales of the privations they had encountered. This brought the exodus to a halt. But by 1727 Palatine Germans again decided to seek their fortunes in the New World. They arrived in large numbers until about the time of the Revolution. Almost all of them settled first in Pennsylvania and in the late 1700's many migrated down into the Shenandoah Valley area of Maryland and Virginia and into certain counties of North Carolina. Migration into Ohio and the mid-west did not generally begin until about 1800.

CENSUS RECORDS

The best way to begin research on your direct line is by searching census records. The first federal census in this country was taken in 1790. It was taken every ten years thereafter. Until the 1850 census, only the names of heads of households were given. Beginning in 1850, names, ages, birthplaces and occupations of all members of every household were given. Census records are available to the public (for census years 1790 thru 1880), on microfilm, at most large libraries, or can be rented thru the mail from a microfilm rental library for $1, or you can have a checker in Washington, D.C. copy your family data for $2.

In 1790 the family appeared in the following places:

EALER, formerly a member of the Lower House of the Pennsylvania State Legislature, now residing in Williams Township, Northampton County, is a native of Forks Township, Lehigh County, born September 29,1834. The family of which he is a representative has long been established in Pennsylvania and identified with this county from an early period of its history. Here were born his father and mother, Thomas E. and Sophia Ealer. His primary education was gained in the public schools of Forks Township, after which he was for a time a student in Wood's Academy, Easton. His studies completed, Mr. Ealer entered upon the profession of a teacher, which he followed for several years, and he has also for 15 years served as Justice of the Peace. In the Democratic party he is a local leader, and upon that ticket has been elected to various responsible positions. For two terms he represented his district in the State Legislature, where he rendered efficient service in the interests of his constituents. He also served as Auditor of Williams Township. His life occupation has been mainly that of agriculture, and he is now the owner of 70 acres of well tilled land. In 1850 Mr. Ealer was united in marriage with Miss Barbh, daughter of William and Rebecca Itterly, late of Plainfield Township. There have been born unto them 12 children. The family is connected with the Lutheran Church, to the support of which Mr. Ealer is a generous contributor. Socially he is a member of Fairview Grange in Williams Township, of which he has officiated as Master since its organization several years ago."

THE EHLER (OHLER) FAMILY

Immigration Data

Although German in origin, the family in this country has come to be identified with that group of early Americans known as "Pennsylvania Deutsch", meaning German, but the words soon became corrupted into "Dutch". They applied this name to those Swiss, German and even French Huguenots who arrived here in the 1700's and settled in a certain small area roughly defined as: south central and eastern Pennsylvania.

From: "Early Eighteenth Century Palatine Emigration"

p. 261 Johann Henrig Eiller, his wife and three children embarked with the fourth party of Palatine Germans from Rotterdam harbor in June, 1709, destined for the Mohawk Valley of New York State.
p. 276 Henry Eyler, his wife and two children, returned to Holland in 1709, discouraged with conditions in New York State. This was in 1771.

The before mentioned ships were English, embarking from the port of Rotterdam and landing at Philadelphia harbor. Almost all the passengers on board these ships were from the Palatinate section of Germany. Since generally only the names of the adult male passengers were listed, it is likely that some of the above were accompanied by their families.

In the eighteenth century conditions were poor in the Palatinate section of Germany. In the year 1709 a large colony of Palatines emigrated from Germany to the New World. They landed at New York and settled there in the Mohawk Valley where they discovered conditions to be as bad, if not worse, than those they left behind. By 1771 many had returned to Germany bringing with them tales of the privations they had encountered. This brought the exodus to a halt. But by 1727 Palatine Germans again decided to seek their fortunes in the New World. They arrived in large numbers until about the time of the Revolution. Almost all of them settled in the late 1700's many migrated down into the Shenandoah Valley area of Maryland and Virginia and into certain counties of North Carolina. Migration into Ohio and the mid-west did not generally begin until about 1800.

CENSUS RECORDS

The best way to begin research on your direct line is by searching census records. The first federal census in this country was taken in 1790. It was taken every ten years therafter. Until the 1850 census, only the names of heads of households were given. Beginning in 1850, names, ages, birthplaces and occupations of all members of every household were given. Census records are available to the public (for census years 1790 thru 1880), on microfilm, at most large libraries, or can be rented thru the mail from a microfilm rental library for $1, or you canhave a checker in Washington, D.C. copy your family data for $2. They had been sent to his brother by a woman, charging him $4.00 for the data, several years before. These are copied from the 1st 17 pages. Jim said there were several other pages, but never got around to sending the other pages. I put them on the computer, trying to clear up the many paper records, around my house.
